3/1/2023	@alex_kirshner	29.4K followers	Link	Lol at the Commanders getting "an F minus" in travel in the NFLPA's player treatment grades, the only team to do so
3/1/2023	@dcsportsbog	72.8K followers	Link	The Washington Commanders have the worst facilities and environment for players and their families, according to a survey of players conducted by the NFL Players Association. (via @NickiJhabvala and @MarkMaske)
3/1/2023	@BurgundyBlog	39.3K followers	Link	NFLPA released its first ever team report cards. #Commanders rank dead last, 32nd out of 32. Got an F in treatment of families, and "F-" in training room, locker room, and team travel. F minus!
3/1/2023	@MarkMaske	26.2K followers	Link	The NFLPA releases a survey of 1,300 players league-wide grading teams on their working environments for players. The Commanders ranked last among the 32 NFL teams in the survey.
3/1/2023	@dcsportsbog	72.8K followers	Link	"The team received an F for its treatment of families, a D+ for its nutritional offerings, a C+ for its weight room, an F- for its athletic training room, a D for its athletic training staff and an F- for its locker room and travel operations." Well. I guess the C+ helps.
3/1/2023	@gregauman	61.7K followers	Link	The NFLPA team "report cards" gave up 19 grades of F or F-minus in eight categories: Cardinals got 5, Commanders 4, Chargers and Bengals 2 each:
3/1/2023	@dcsportsbog	72.8K followers	Link	No F+ in any category? F+ would be a funny grade.
3/1/2023	@dcsportsbog	72.8K followers	Link	From the story: "Players reported a lack of warm water and poor drainage in showers and minimal personal space in the locker room and on team flights."

3/1/2023	@NickiJhabvala	51.4K followers	Link	In an NFLPA survey of players taken this season, the Commanders ranked last in the league for their overall working conditions for players and support of their families.
3/1/2023	@JPFinlayNBCS	84.5K followers	Link	Most of these rankings have direct correlation to facilities, which has a direct correlation to ownership. I dont put this much at all on coaching or front office.
3/1/2023	@NickiJhabvala	51.4K followers	Link	The Commanders facilities ranked as some of the worst (if not THE worst), but their strength and conditioning staff graded as one of the best in the league. They received an A+ grade from the players, tied for first in the NFL.

3/1/2023	@michaelpRTD	14.8K followers	Link	The Commanders are one of six NFL teams that makes some players share a hotel room the night before games. More findings from the NFLPA survey:
3/1/2023	@Sportico	30.7K followers	Link	The @Commanders however are ranked 32nd (last) in the @NFLPA's team guide. Besides the strength coaches who received great feedback, 'the rest of the club's operations and facilities were rated by player respondents at the bottom of every single category.'

3/1/2023	@granthpaulsen	120.9K followers	Link	The grades assigned to the Commanders are very telling. Strength Staff: A+ Weight room: C+ Nutrition: D+ Training staff: D Treatment of Facilities: F Training room: F- Team Travel: F-
3/1/2023	@team980	36.0K followers	Link	The Commanders received several failing grades and had the worst overall grade in the league, according to a new survey of NFL players from the @NFLPA
3/1/2023	@JamieBollWBTV	9.5K followers	Link	NFLPA surveyed its players, basically asking about working conditions at each franchise. #Panthers rated 12th best overall. More here: nflpa.com/carolina-panth... #Commanders ranked last.
3/1/2023	@granthpaulsen	120.9K followers	Link	This is a direct result of bad ownership and culture. Could also be result of lacking $$$. The organization does a terrible job prioritizing things fans can't see. They don't meet industry standards on things that aren't consumer-facing. THIS DOESN'T EVEN INCLUDE THE STADIUM.
3/1/2023	@RalphVacchiano	85.7K followers	Link	In @NFLPA player survey of team working conditions, rating things like food, facilities, locker room, travel accommodations, and treatment of families, the Washington Commanders were rated the worst organization in the league. Their strength coaches got an A-plus, though. 🖱

3/1/2023	@Scott7news	18.4K followers	Link	The three top-ranked teams overall in this survey, in order, were the Minnesota Vikings, the Miami Dolphins and the Las Vegas Raiders. Bottom three, (ranked 30 through 32, in order) were the Los Angeles Chargers, Arizona Cardinals and the Washington Commanders.
3/1/2023	@granthpaulsen	120.9K followers	Link	Imagine your kid brining home this report card. You find out they are ranked 32nd in a 32 student class and there marks are as follows.
3/1/2023	@mr_jasonjones	29.0K followers	Link	NFLPA player survey: Dolphins, Raiders voted best working conditions, Commanders have worst via @TheAthletic. Interesting because the Raiders were in the news for being sued for the environment. I know those aren't players in the suits but still ...
3/1/2023	@AlbertBreer	599.7K followers	Link	Really interesting, and revealing, look here from players on how they view the teams they're playing for—1,300 players submitted grades in a variety of categories. Reflects well on some teams. Not so much on others.
3/1/2023	@RalphVacchiano	85.7K followers	Link	The Commanders players, in the @NFLPA survey, complained about ... <ul style="list-style-type: none"> 🏈 Hot/cold tubs that are too small. 🏈 Not enough warm water. 🏈 Poor shower drainage. 🏈 Small locker spaces. The Commanders are also one of 6 teams that make some players share rooms on the road.

3/1/2023	@dcsportsbog	72.8K followers	Link	The survey does show that poor performance in the survey doesn't preclude winning. The 2022 Super Bowl featured the Rams (D+) and Bengals (F). The 2021 Super Bowl was won by the Bucs (D+). And the Cowboys got an A+
3/1/2023	@JPFinlayNBCS	84.5K followers	Link	Spoke with some current and former Commanders players and one area that caused confusion - they love the food and nutrition staff. The physical cafeteria? Not so much. Again goes back to old facilities.
3/1/2023	@granthpaulsen	120.9K followers	Link	The PA suggested it's survey was done, in part, to help players share with one another about their current club, to "help them make important career decisions." The Commanders ranking dead last won't help with FA looming. Quiet part got said out loud. This is a really big deal.

3/1/2023	@ZachCoxNESN	32.8K followers	Link	There were nine "F-" grades handed out on the NFLPA player survey. The Cardinals had three, and the Commanders had two. One each for the Chargers, Ravens, Bengals and Saints: ARI/LAC/WAS training room BAL strength staff ARI weight room ARI/CIN/NO nutrition WAS travel
3/1/2023	@BarstoolNate	129.8K followers	Link	The NFLPA surveyed 1300 players and asked them to rank several different categories. Dan Snyder's Commanders finished dead last, with multiple F- scores.

3/1/2023	@Scott7news	18.4K followers	Link	NFL free agents...come play for the Washington @Commanders! This is a really bad look. The @NFLPA put out a survey for players to give some insight into their respective teams. The Commanders were rated worst in the NFL...taking the average of the categories below.
3/1/2023	@gregauman	61.7K followers	Link	Two travel complaints from NFLPA team "report cards" -- six NFL teams require young players to have roommates on the road (Bucs, Commanders, Colts, Titans, Chiefs, Bills) and seven don't offer first-class seats on flights (Bucs, Commanders, Colts, Titans, Eagles, Cowboys, Bears).
3/1/2023	@JPFinlayNBCS	84.5K followers	Link	One guy that deserves credit from this survey- Chad Englehart. Head strength coach. Been there since 2010 and players love him and his team. A+ rating in NFLPA survey.
3/1/2023	@JunksRadio	38.8K followers	Link	1,300 players provided information to share with one another about their current club, to not only help them make important career decisions, but also help raise standards across the league.
